

Hello, GitLab

I'm Nick Adams, a Designer with about 10 years of experience designing everything from design systems to web and mobile apps.

I'd love to be a part of your team.

Who Am I?

Most recently I've been a Product Designer at Hudl. I've been there for 6+ years where I've worked on a wide variety of projects — mobile apps, web apps, design systems, design ops, user research, etc.

Why Am I Applying?

I recently started using GitLab for all of my personal projects and side-projects. In the past I had used Bitbucket and Github, and only kept an eye on Gitlab from afar. I decided to make the switch and I have been very pleased. It was a crash course in the product and I was amazed by the feature-set and execution.

From there I dug a bit more into to the company and the way you operate and build products. I was blown away. The open and transparent nature, the embracing of remote work, the documentation and organization. These are all things that both impressed me and spoke directly to my sensibilities.

The opportunity to work on a product like yours, for a company like yours, was an opportunity I didn't want to pass up. As I've continued to use Gitlab on my own, this was only reinforced. I feel like the type of work that happens at Gitlab is a perfect match for how I want to work. I want to build what I design. I want to talk about data models as much as typography. I want to be in a code editor as much as a design tool. I like to think in systems and create better workflows, and I want to be able to communicate and collaborate with engineering.

I want to learn and be challenged and have the opportunity to contribute to a product and a company that I believe in. I'd love the chance to talk more about my experience and skillset to see if there is a good fit for me to do just that.

Thank you for your time and consideration!
